February, 2001 (Des Plaines, IL) – ICCP announces new Members to Certification Council.

The ICCP is proud to announce the appointment of two of its holders as members of the ICCP Certification Council. David Horvath, CCP, has been a holder since 1988 and is an author of various computing publications. Rick Seaman, CCP has been a holder since 1990 and is the Director of Financial Information Systems at the University of Virginia.

The ICCP Certification Council is responsible for overseeing the certification programs of the ICCP and for establishing and maintaining the standards for certification of computing

The Institute for the Certification of Computing Professionals (ICCP) is a membership organization dedicated to the establishment of professional standards in the Information Systems Industry. We promote this goal, along with our 7 Constituent and 18 Affiliate societies, by offering the most widely recognized non-vendor-specific certification examinations in the profession.
